NEW ENGLISH CHURCH IN REDCLIFF CONSECRATED

Ceremony Performed By Lord Bishop of Qu'Appelle---Attended By Large Crowd---Bishop Given Reception After Ceremony---Mayor Delivers Address of Welcome---Boy Scouts Form Guard of Honor.

Thursday, Dec. 3rd, 1914, will go down in history as the red-letter day in the life of the English church in this town. The day marks the completion and consecration not only of Redcliff's first English church, but one of the finest places of worship in this diocese.

The ceremony in connection with the formal opening and consecration occupied the whole evening. First came the presentation and hoisting of the new Union Jack presented to the congregation by the Sons of England lodge. This took place promptly at seven o'clock in the presence of a large number of spectators, including the bishop, visiting clergymen and the lodge members.--Mr. S. D. Miller, president of the lodge, made the presentation. In his remarks he spoke of the glorious position the flag now occupies, flying as it does where ever the sun shines. In reference to the war, Mr. Miler spoke of the thousands in all the Empire's colonies who were rushing to assist in protecting the honor of the good old flag. Concluding, he expressed the hope that the Union Jack would emerge from the present struggle victorious. The flag was then raised and unfurled.

At seven-thirty the service of consecration was commenced in the church before a large congregation by Bishop Harding, Lord Bishop of Qu' Appelle, Rural Dean Davis, of Medicine Hat, carrying the insignia of office, led the procession, and was followed by his lordship, the rector and the choir.

The font, which stood at the entrance of the church, was first dedicated for baptismal purposes, after which the bishop proceeded to the chancel steps, where he offered up a prayer in consecration of that portion of the church for confirmation and unity in the holy bonds of matrimony. The lectern was then consecrated for the reading of Holy Scripture, and the pulpit for the preaching of God's Holy Word. The blessing of the altar and holy vessels followed, after which the formal act of consecration was performed.

Herbert Cyril Butler Gibson, supported by Jas. Chadwick, vicar's warden, and John Harbott, people's warden, was then inducted as vicar of the parish of St. Ambrose, Redcliff, and given God's blessing.

The bishop then preached an eloquent, helpful and encouraging, sermon. His remarks throughout were of thankfulness and joy for the great and good work which had been accomplished in this parish. He said the church was a gift from Christ Himself, and that the people should consider it as such. In speaking of the present war his lordship said an extra wave of patriotism was passing over the Empire, and he assured his hearers they could best show their loyalty to the Empire by being loyal to its churches. If there were any lessons to be derived from the war he thought one would be, that it would bring us back to a fuller realization of our duty to God, and more especially along this line value the means of grace, public worship and the sacredness of the Sabbath.

In conclusion he congratulated St. Ambrose people for the beautiful church they had erected. He also complimented the choir on their appearance and fine singing, which added so much to the success of the service. Nor were the boy scouts, who were present in a body, overlooked. His lordship gave them a word of encouragement, saying he was glad they were interested in their work, and he felt sure this movement would be the means of raising up in Canada a nation of Christian gentlemen.

After the consecration ceremony the boy scouts formed a guard of honor outside the church and escorted the bishop and clergy to Reid's hall, where a reception was held. Here, too, the hall was crowded to its capacity. After all had been comfortably seated, Mayor Bott, on behalf of the council and citizens, extended the bishop a hearty welcome to our town. He assured his lordship that every citizen was glad of the circumstances under which the visit was made, and all were proud that the impressions of the consecration successful in building such a fine church. He expressed the hope that its activities in the future would be as great as those in the past, and that ceremony and entertainment with us services would leave an imprint on the lives of the people as permanent as the structure.

He thought it spoke well for our town that during these strenuous and materialistic times our people were not forgetting their churches. His worship also paid a tribute to the energy of the present incumbent, and expressed the hope that he might long be spared to labor amongst us.

In replying Bishop Harding thanked the mayor and citizens for their hearty welcome. He had been in Redcliff before, and was pleased to see it had grown so rapidly since his last visit. He regretted the state of war through which the Empire was passing, but felt sure that after it was all over Canada, and especially Western Canada, would see great progress and development than ever before. Notwithstanding the stringent times, the church which he represented was growing and prospering. Since the last diocesan meeting six had been called upon to open 24 new churches.

During the first part of the evening a musical programme was given in which solos were sung by Miss Sherwin and Messrs. White and Courtnell. So well were these rendered that encores were demanded by the audience.

Refreshments were served in the lunch room adjoining the hall, after which the young folks enjoyed dancing.

Those in charge of the evening's ceremony and entertainment wish us to thank all who assisted in making the affair such a great success, and to specially mention the excellent service rendered by the boy scouts.

Will Put Enemies To Work In Canada

General Sir, William Otter, who is to have charge of the registration of the alien enemy throughout Canada, has opened an office in the capital, as he proposes to make headquarters here. No definite arrangements have yet been made in regard to the Austrians and Germans, but it has been decided that they will not be permitted to remain in the cities during the winter months. It is practically certain that in Quebec they will be allowed to settle after the war. It is likely that a good many will be sent to do work at Petawawa camp, to make it ready for the training of Canadian troops previous to their departure for the front early in the summer.

We are in receipt of a joint letter from C. F. McLean and Herbert F. Smith, two young Redcliff boys who are now with the Canadian contingent at Salisbury Plains. These two boys are with the Cameron Highlanders of Canada.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. Purkiss wish to thank all their kind friends for the splendid assistance given to them when they lost their home and everything it contained, some things which can never be replaced.

I can assure you that we feel deeply indebted to Mr. Wray for his speedy assistance in getting us fixed up so soon in one of Mr. Lockwood's houses, for which we are most thankful, also to Mr. Harlee, Mr. Livingstone, the Rev. Gordon and all who so kindly donated to our assistance.

I may be called upon at any moment to help in a similar manner, and I trust by the help of God I may not be found wanting.

What a glorious thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

Again thanking all for their kindness,

Yours very truly,
E. F. PURKISS.

RUSSIAN ARMY IS NEARING CRACOW

Interest in the war is now almost entirely centred in the struggle between the Russian and German hosts in the East.

At last the Russians have approached within firing distance of Cracow, their steady advance from Przemyl having proceeded without any real check. They were reported today to be mounting heavy batteries around the town of Wielicka, which they occupied yesterday and from which the outer defences of Cracow can be reached.

RATEPAYERS MEETING WAS VERY QUIET

Large Crowd Turn Out---But Few Questions Asked---School Trustees Report Great Progres---Sell Debentures and Will Build in Spring.

Although there was a large turnout of ratepayers at he annual meeting held last Monday evening nothing out of the ordinary took place, and the meeting passed off very quietly.

David Black was chosen as chairman, and proceeded to call on the different councillors for their reports of work done during the year.

Mayor Bott was the first speaker. He stated that the optimistic note with which the council started out at the beginning of the year had been somewhat interfered with, and they had not been able to carry out their programme on account of financial conditions. The town was, however, in good shape, as the financial statement shows. He thought we were in a position to set the pace for Western Canada when normal conditions return.

He read a condensed report of the auditor's statement as it appeared in our last issue. While the statement showed a surplus there was not really one, but the amount had to be classified as such under the circumstances. He also went fully into the three bylaws which were being submitted to the ratepayers and explained the necessity for them. The mayor was asked what the council were doing about a cemetery, and in reply said that committees had been appointed to look into the matter, but so far no satisfactory sites had been found. He said the question would be taken up and settled as soon as possible.

The council had been somewhat demoralized during the past six months owing to the retirement or removal of three of its members. As a result only three of this year's board are now active members. These are Messrs. Lavelle, Ireland and McLachlan, and as the committee work is divided up amongst them, each gave a very favorable report of the work undertaken and carried out in the different departments.

Mr. Broadfoot, chairman of the school board, was then called on. He reviewed the progress of the school since starting, pointing out that four years ago there were but 29 scholars on the roll. They built a four room school and people thought the board was foolish for building so large. It was only a short time, however, till it was necessary to build a four room addition. Now even it is not large enough and the board have to rent another room. At present there are 304 pupils on the roll. He said the board had been successful recently in disposing of $25,000 worth of debentures. This would be used for purchasing sites and building three cottage schools. These would have been built this year, but they could not sell their debentures. Now, however, they hoped to start on them early in the spring.

Mr. Riddell, secretary of the school board, read the auditors' report, a full copy of which appears on another page of this issue.

In concluding the meeting the Mayor thanked the ratepayers for the general spirit of good will which they had shown throughout the year. While there had been some idle gossip and criticism he felt that the majority of the citizens had the idea that other people--even the councillors--were as honest and industrious as they themselves are.

The Young Girls Form a Club

Evidently with a desire not to be outdone by their older sisters, the young girls of the town have also formed a girls' club. At the organization meeting held at Miss Edith Broadfoot's home last Wednesday, it was decided to call the club "Sans Facon." Their motto is "Dum Vivimus, Vivamus," which is being interpreted "While we live, let us live." At the first meeting a most enjoyable evening was spent in games, songs, etc. The club meets every Wednesday evening.

SMALL BLAZE AT BRICK & COAL PLANT

As usual we had our three fires in a row. The third occurred last Friday afternoon, just after we went to press, and the alarm was sent in from the Brick and Coal plant. At first great excitement prevailed, as it was reported the mine was on fire, but investigation showed it was only a small piece of framework on the air shaft that had caught fire. The wooden shaft runs from the opening of the mine and connects with the main shaft. In order to create a draft a small fire is kept under the mouth, and it is supposed the fire had been turned on too strong, igniting this wooden framework.

The fire brigade made a quick run, and soon had the small blaze extinguished. The damage done only amounted to about $80, and was repaired the day after the fire. The fire in no way interfered with the working of the mine, in fact some of the miners did not know the fire had happened till after it was all over.

Redcliff Young Man Held up on Street

The Ladies' M. U. M. club met at the home of Miss McKay last Tuesday evening, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. When it came going home time and the members of the club reached the street a most exciting time happened. Just as a bevy of the maids left the house an innocent, harmless bachelor happened to be passing, and as all seemed to be of the same mind at the same time, a mad rush was made for the poor man. In the scuffle to see who was going to secure him for an escort, the fortunate (?) fellow got a pretty rough mauling, but finally emerged with only one on each arm. The rest of the girls formed in a procession and brought up the rear, singing "Oh where, oh where, has my little Bert gone."

There are some wondering now whether this young man just happened along or whether the act was premeditated.

General Alderson Says Canadians are Fighters

Responding to the toast of "The Imperial Forces" at the anniversary dinner of the Royal Scottish corps last night, General Alderson made a pleasing reference to the Canadians now under his command. He had charge, he said, of the first and second Canadian Rifles and Strathcona Horse in South Africa and he learned there to respect them, both as men and as fighters.

"I can tell you," he added, "that the 30,000 men now on Salisbury Plain from Canada are the same sort of men. They are men of such physique that if you were to put them in guardsmen's clothes and march them through London you would say 'what splendid guardsmen they are.' More than that they have the most splendid spirit I have ever known in my 37 years of soldiering. I can assure you that when our time comes to go across the water---and let us hope it will be soon---the men I have the honor to command will do their duty as well as the rest of the forces of the Empire are doing."

King George Visits Forces in France

The official press bureau stated that King George went to France last Monday to visit the headquarters of the British expeditionary force.

B. C. GIFTS TO BRITAIN

The Canadian Pacific steamer Montreal arrived in London on Tuesday having 25,287 cases of canned salmon, a gift from the province of British Columbia to the imperial government and also gifts of 100 cases of canned clams from the Sydney Trading company of British Columbia, and one of ten of salted codfish from the John Kendall and Sons, Alberni, B. C.

The action of W. G. Gillespie against J. F. Bending for $15,466 commission arising out of the sale of north Redcliff properties to the defendant to D. D. Fitzgerald, was tried in Medicine Hat. The case was dismissed.

FOUR NIGHT CLASSES FORMED IN REDCLIFF

Classes Arranged and Instructor Chosen---Meeting Night Set---Full Classes for Mining, Drafting, Sewing and Typewriting---Should Have Class for Foreigners.

There was a good turn-out at the school last Monday evening for the purpose of further discussing the question of night classes and if possible to form classes for the different branches to be taken up.

It was found that enough had signed up to start off with at least four classes. These are as follows: Drafting, mining, sewing, shorthand and stenography.

In the drafting class nine have entered, and F. Hurd will be the instructor. This class meets Tuesdays and Fridays. The regular meeting will be held tonight.

Robt. Hamilton has been engaged to instruct the mining class. In it eight have enrolled. It is Mr. Hamilton's intention to also take up mechanics and steam in this class.

In the sewing classes seventeen ladies joined. Under this heading both fancy and plain sewing will be taken up. Mrs. C. Gibson will have charge of the former, and Mrs. G. Gibson of the latter. The classes will meet on Mondays and Thursdays.

For shorthand and typewriting fifteen joined. Mr. Reeve will have charge of this class. Bookkeeping may be added to this class in the near future if enough desire to take it up. This class meets on Tuesdays and Fridays.

We understand there are a number of people of foreign birth in town who would like to take up English, but owing to the hard times are unable to pay the tuition fee. Since the question of educating the foreign element in this western part of Canada is a most important one, and since so much depends on it for our future welfare, the school board might make some arrangements whereby these classes could be started at once.

On the whole this question of night schools undertaken by the trustees is starting out under most promising circumstances, and will, no doubt, prove a most interesting feature of the winter's work.

Boer Rebel Leader Captured In Africa

General Christian De Wet, leader of the rebellion in the Union of South Africa, has been taken prisoner, according to an official announcement made at Pretoria. He was captured by Col. Conrad Britz last Tuesday on a farm at Warterburg, a town 100 miles east of Mafeking, in British Bechuanaland.

Alberta Will Send 4500 More Soldiers

Gen. Sam Hughes announces that Alberta would be called upon to raise two mounted regiments, amounting to about 1,200 men and officers, and three regiments of infantry, amounting to 3,300 men, in the usual way.

AUTO ROAD THROUGH CANADIAN ROCKIES.

The automobile road following the magnificent scenic route from Calgary to the Graithivie in the Rockies, through the Rocky Mountain park, is completed. It follows the Bow river and C. P. R. for the greater part of the course. The British Columbia government will build a similar automobile road from the coast to the summit of the Rockies, making this possibly the greatest scenic route in the world for motorists.

There has been a suggestion of extending the road right across the continent, but this has not been seriously considered as yet. The parks branch of the interior department has had surveyed and located a no worse running off from the main route. It will be from Castle mountain to Lagan, and thence to Field and Yoho park. This will not be constructed until after the war.

SHOULD HAVE AN ELEVATOR

In conversation with C. S. Pingle, member for this constituency in the local legislature, about securing an elevator for Redcliff as suggested in these columns last week, he assured us that the provincial government will give every possible assistance to make such a thing possible.

Mr. Pingle informed us that if the citizens of the town and farmers of the surrounding district will subscribe fifteen per cent. of the necessary funds to build the elevator the government will provide in cash the other eighty-five per cent. of the cost.

We do not know just exactly what an elevator properly equipped would cost. That would depen daltogether on the size, machinery and other equipment. But to illustrate the proposition we will say the elevator complete will cost ten thousand dollars. This would mean that the people concerned would raise $1,500.00 and the government would provide the balance, $8,500.00.

When it is remembered what a great advantage an elevator would be to our town, and more especially to those in business, it seems to us no time should be lost in an endeavor to take advantage of this proposition.

If those interested will undertake to start a movement in this direction, Mr. Pingle assures us he will start the list with $100 worth of shares.

To our mind this is a matter that should not be lost sight of, and the sooner a start is made the better so that everything can be got in order for handling next year's crop.

Since our board of trade seems at present to be defunct, and since this year's council is now about at the end of its tether we would suggest that this be one of the first things taken up by the council of 1915.

The council could appoint a committee either of its own members or of business men and farmers, to go fully into the matter, secure plans and solicit subscriptions. If the required amount is not fully subscribed, the council would, we feel sure, be endorsed by the ratepayers if they make a substantial grant.

With this liberal assistance from the government, there is no reason why we should not have an elevator in operation here next fall. This matter should not be lost sight of.

PAY YOUR TAXES

As we stated in our last week's issue, and as may have been seen by the auditor's report there is an unusually large amount of money outstanding for taxes at the present time.

Under ordinary conditions this might not be such a serious matter, but at the present time, when it is almost impossible to sell debentures of any large amount, the non-payment of taxes makes it almost impossible for the council to carry on even the ordinary improvements, and as a result towns in such a position are kept practically at a standstill.

At present the martial and patriotic spirit is at the highest pitch, and while we all cannot but feel proud of the true British ring that permeates the very air we breathe, yet we must not lose sight of the fact that one of the best ways to show our patriotism is by looking well after our own corner of the Empire and by doing our share to keep it in a flourishing condition. One of the best ways of doing this is to keep on developing and improving. To do this our council requires money and the source of this money supply is by way of taxes. If taxes are not paid, therefore, their hands are tied. The moral is obvious.

ANOTHER MILESTONE

Just three year sago last Monday the proprietor of this paper first struck Redcliff. Since that time the town has undergone wonderful growth and almost unprecedented development and if it had not been for the stringency of the past six months we feel sure that the hopes and predictions of the most sanguine who were here at that time, would, ere this, have been realized.

In looking back over these three years we must say it is with no small degree of interest and pride we now review that growth and development.

On arriving here there was no C.P.R. station. In fact Redcliff was not marked on the C.P.R. map until the matter was brought to the attention of C.P.R. officials by this paper. At that time there were but sixty-eight buildings in town, most of which were shacks scattered about on the prairies, and the total population was only 300. The Brick and Coal plant and the flour mill were the only industries in operation, and the Clay Products was only being constructed. The only house in what is now known as the north end was that built by Dr. Stoner on 5th street and now occupied by A. J. Nicholson. The town boasted of but two groceries and a butcher shop, and a school half the size of the present one was being erected.

Since then there has been a steady growth until today we have more reason than ever to feel proud of our town which has won the distinction of being one of the leading industrial centres of Western Canada, with a most promising future ahead of it. During these three years it has grown from a town of two industries to one of ten, each of which under normal conditions, employ a large number of hands, and each being a credit not only to the town but to the whole Dominion.

True, we are at present in keeping with the rest of the business world, passing through a stagnant stage, but we have not lost hope. On the contrary we look for even greater development in the next three years than what we have experienced in the past three.

On the whole we have every reason to be thankful we located here when we did, and we intend to stay.

We, therefore, think it fitting on this occasion to thank our readers and patrons for their support in the past, and trust we may merit a continuance of the same from year to year as each milestone is passed.

KING'S VISIT TO THE FRONT

The visit of King George to his troops now fighting in France is but in keeping with the traditions of Britain's kings and will, no doubt, stimulate the men to greater and nobler achievements. His visit shows he is no mere figurehead in this strife, and is another proof of the worry and work it is causing him. The long list of fatalities among British officers, the frequent visit of the leading military men to the firing line to give the Allies the benefit of their knowledge and experience, even at the risk of their own lives, the death of that venerable hero of many battles, Lord Roberts, while in sound of the cannon, and the visit of the King all go to show from whence comes the inspiration, the loyalty and the strength of British arms.

CAN HARDLY BLAME THEM

The municipal election keeps getting warmer every day in Medicine Hat. A new argument used against some of the aspirants for municipal honors is that they have been investing their money in Redcliff instead of in their home town. While we are firm believers in spending one's money where he makes it, yet we can hardly blame Medicine Hat men for investing money in a real live industrial centre like Redcliff. It is only natural that men with hard earned cash to invest should place it where they will get sure returns. That's the difference between investment and speculation.

AN UNWISE MOVE

Since the Conservative convention held in Medicine Hat last Thursday, when Nelson Spencer was chosen as candidate for this federal constituency, there has been more or less criticism heard on all sides as to the wisdom of the choice.

While none appear to doubt the ability of Mr. Spencer, a large number feel that he could better have served his district and the province by staying where he is as member of the local legislature.

To our mind the people of the provincial constituency of Medicine Hat have just cause for complaint with Mr. Spencer's actions. They worked hard to elect him to the provincial legislature, and now by accepting the federal nomination against the wishes of a large number of delegates from his local constituency, he has placed them in a very embarrassing position. Besides putting them to the expense and trouble of carrying on a bye-election, the chances are ten to one that the seat will be lost to the party.

That Mr. Spencer has proved an energetic and hard worker in the local legislature not even his opponents will deny. In the opposition he is one of the leaders and it is because we believe that next best to a strong government is a strong opposition, that we think Mr. Spencer should stay where he is. He is not needed at Ottawa, as his party in the federal house has scores of strong, able men, all of cabinet calibre, and he would only be a back-bencher. He is needed and needed badly at Edmonton, where his party has but a mere handful in the house and where he is a front bencher, capable of rendering able service to his, constituency, his district and the whole province.

We understand that so strong is the feeling along these lines that there is already talk of calling another convention.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan are talking of closing all bars and liquor stores and clubs at six o'clock during the war.

On the Overland

He Changed His Mind

By WILLIAM MACLEOD RAINE

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

At Pasadena Ralston boarded the California Overland. He passed through the train to the Pullman and dropped into the seat which had been reserved for him by wire. A woman in half mourning occupied the section opposite. He could not see her face, but he divined from the outline of her figure that she was young and good looking.

Ralston, following her example, fell to an inattentive inspection of the scenery. They were being whirled through orange groves lined with ragged eucalyptus or graceful pepper trees.

But Ralston was restless, and the scenery failed to interest him, nor did the magazine into which he plunged prove of much more avail. At last he leaned it aside.

"YOU MUST NOT DO IT!"

"What rot the magazines sometimes print!" he said, unconsciously speaking aloud.

"I beg pardon. Did you speak?"

Even as he turned his head Ralston felt the thrill of vivid life rush through him. He had not heard that voice for five years, but he would have known it among ten thousand. The gray eyes met the brown ones.

"Kate!"

"Robert!"

Then both together. "What are you doing away out here?"

He explained that he was on his way back from the Philippines, where he had been the correspondent of an illustrated weekly. She, it appeared, was returning to the east from a visit to an aunt in Los Angeles. For an hour they talked of the people and the places they had known. He studied her covertly.

"Let me see—it must be four years since I saw you last."

"Five. Have I changed much?"

"No. I can't say that you have. People don't change much, as a rule; they merely develop. You were, only a girl when I left. Of course it was open to you to develop in any one of several ways, but I see the track and see that you are what one might have logically expected you to become."

"Dear me, is it as bad as that?" she said lightly.

"As good, I should call it," he answered gravely. She shot a quick sidelong glance at him. "Often out in the Philippines when I was lying in the night, looking up at the stars in the sky, and trying to find the softest spot of a cruelly hard pillow, I have wondered what you would be like when I met you again. Marriage often changes a woman so completely."

"I thought you said that people don't change; that they only develop."

"I'll modify it, then. Marriage sometimes changes a woman completely for better or worse."

There is no place like an overland train for quick friendships, unless it may be an ocean liner. Casual acquaintances of many years' standing become intimate in a day. Long before the train had reached Albuquerque Ralston was wondering whether his boyhood's love was to devour him again. Kate was free; her husband had been dead three years, and her old charm appealed to him as subtly as ever. He wished the journey would never end.

Kate noticed that he began to grow reminiscent; his eyes were shining with a steady glow that brightened his face. Once he took out his watch, and she heard him say softly under his breath, "Twelve hours more!" She knew that at La Junta he would change for Denver, and she felt an impending crisis approaching. But her feeling was all of joy—a joy so fierce and poignant that it was scarce akin to happiness.

She had married a man who had not loved her and whom she had not loved. They had been friends and nothing more. Now this young man's wild passion found ready echo in her love starved heart. Always she had loved him, though never till this day had she admitted it to herself.

The porter came round to make up the berths. They moved to an adjoining section and forgot the passing hours—forgot everything except each other's presence. More than one passenger watched them curiously and wondered what fascinating topic held them in such rapt interest. The last lingerer from the smoking section had long since retired before they took any cognisance of time. At last he looked at his watch absently. He was startled to see that it was past 1 o'clock.

"It must be late," she said, noting for the first time that the lights were low and that they were alone.

"No; it's early," he replied unblushingly. "Don't go yet. You'll have plenty of time to sleep after I leave you."

She stayed, against her judgment. She told herself that she would leave him in a few minutes. He had not mentioned love, but she felt the strong undertow of it through all his turbid speech. When at last she broke away from him it was to lie all the night through in vivid wakefulness.

For Ralston the night was filled with the storm of emotion. The one woman in the world for him was in the section across the aisle, and he had to face the fact that he was bound to another. Two years before, in the bitter loneliness of soul that comes to men in exile, he had met Major Remington's daughter and had asked her to marry him. She had neither accepted nor rejected him, but when she left for the States three months later there had been an understanding between them that he was to seek her out and renew his suit when he came back to America. He had been detained in the Philippines longer then he had expected, but he was now on his way to her.

They were both up early from a sleepless night, and they drifted together again inevitably.

Presently they were climbing the mountain side, with two engines in front and another behind to push. The woman could see the burning misery in the man's eyes, and from him to her there passed the subtle sense of some alien force which divided them.

"You are not married?" she asked him suddenly.

"No, I am not—married."

"You mean that—"

A reckless bitterness welled up in him. "You may congratulate me. I am probably on my way to be married."

Her level eyes fixed him. They were both very white.

"Probably, you say. Don't you know?"

"There was a provisional engagement. It was understood that I was to offer myself again when I returned."

"And you do not love her? So much your tone implies."

"I never loved but the one woman. I have played at love with others."

She shivered. "It is terrible. You must not do that. You have no right!"

"Sometimes a man has signed away his right to do right," he answered stubbornly. "I thought it all out last night, and I shall live up to the letter of my agreement."

A fisherman passed through the car calling: "Next stop La Junta! Change cars for Pueblo, Denver, Colorado Springs and points north of there!"

The train slackened speed, moved down to a halt. He rose and looked down on her with dumb, anguished eyes. She did not rise; her lip did not even touch her hand.

"Whatever happens, I want you to remember that I never loved but the one woman."

She answered, "I shall remember, Robert."

Ralston swung from the car into a collision with Lieutenant Hasbrough of the Seventh infantry.

"I say, my man, he's a little carefulwell, where did you drop from, Ralston?

"Wasn't it at Samar I saw you last, or was it Cebu? You were doing a picture of a burning Gugu village. Hang it, but I'm glad to see you! Where you bound for—Denver? I just came down from there—attended Nan Remington's wedding—member her?—second daughter of Major Remington of Hall's battery."

Ralston's pulse hammered. He gripped the lieutenant's arm with a clutch like steel. "Whose wedding did you say?" he demanded hoarsely.

Hasbrough eyed him curiously, but charitably laid his excitement to a lingering touch of the island fever. Quietly he extricated his arm. "Miss Nan Remington—I say, Ralston, you needn't grow so enthusiastic. I'm not the groom."

"You're sure?"

"Sure I'm not the groom?" laughed the lad.

"No; sure of the wedding. There's no possibility of any mistake, is there?"

The lieutenant roared: "Mistake? I guess not! Why, hang it, I stood up with the man—Jenkins of the artillery. You must remember him."

Ralston climbed up the steps down which he had just come. The car conductor barred his way.

"This isn't the Denver train, sir. It's on the other track."

Ralston laughed happily. "Let it stay there. I'm not looking for it."

"Oh, I thought you said—" began the perplexed official.

"Said! Great streaks of thunder, a man's liable to say anything! There's no tariff on changing your mind since I left the country, is there? I'm going to Chicago."

SECRET OF THE LOVE BIRD.

It May Be Discovered in the Milk of Human Kindness.

Everything else dwindles into insignificance when the love bird appears. Affection, devotion, tenderness and love burst gladly forth at her magic touch. * * *

Success, achievement, wealth, prominence, are only worth while when shared by your friends. No matter how large you rate your "success," it gives you little satisfaction if your accomplishment is not sincerely enjoyed by many. When surrounded by friends and loved ones, if you are fortunate in the acquisition of a generous disposition and charming personality, what a joy it is to be able to give them their comfort, pleasure and satisfaction!

Who does not feel better for the "God bless you" from an old lady to whom you have shown some little kindly attention? Who is not thrilled by the joyous barking of his dog upon returning home?

Fortunate are those who feel the arms of children around their necks, hear the baby's laugh and see the wonderful smiles toddling toward them, happy and unafraid.

All these joys sink into insignificance when the one and only one looks into your eyes, tender, true, steadfast. Words need not be spoken; nothing could express. Then, and not until then, will you know the excess of happiness, the full realization of love, and then is the time to unite yourself, steadfastly to fidelity, magnanimous generosity and open heartedness to all.

Unto us a child is born, * * * and his Name shall be called Wonderful.

SURGICAL SHOCK.

Only in a Vague Way Does Science Know What Causes It.

Shock is still one of the great mysteries of surgery. Many theories have been put forward to explain just what it is. Each of these has seemed attractive until its inherent defects were discovered by experience.

In a lecture before the British Royal College of Surgery Dr. A. Rendle Short reviewed these successive theories and described the experiments of himself and others by which they were disproved. But researches by Dr. Crile of Cleveland, Professor Sherrington of England and Dr. F. H. Pike of Columbia university, New York, seemed to him to offer at least a clew to the real nature of shock.

Professor Short did not formulate a definite theory, but suggested that surgical shock was due to an inhibiting or paralyzing of the important nuclei in the upper region of the fourth ventricle of the brain and perhaps in the cerebellum. These are "continually sending impulses down the spinal cord, keeping its functional activity and increasing muscular tone." The effect of this paralysis is to cut off these impulses, whereupon the functions of the spinal cord are greatly reduced, muscular tone is abolished, and as a secondary result the blood pressure may fall. The respiratory center and perhaps also the vasomotor center share in this inhibition or paralysis.

"Death," said Dr. Short, "is due to the accumulation of blood in the great veins," so that the flow does not provide a proper filling for the heart.—New York World.

Candid Criticism.

Mr. G. A. Storey, the well known painter, once told an amusing story of a family group he painted one year for the Academy. The picture was accepted, and was hung "on the line," and he proceeded to escort the family to the Academy to see how it looked. They were all grouped round the picture, each silently admiring his or her own portrait, when two other people drifted up to have a look.

Suddenly Mr. Storey was appalled to hear one of the newcomers say to his companion, "What an exceedingly ugly looking lot of people!"

A Serious Fault.

"It's nice of you to let me see your proofs, Mr. Lavender. Which do I consider the best? That's rather difficult. There isn't one here that really does you justice—photographic justice, I mean."

"Thank you, Miss Lydia. I would entreat it a great favor if you could intimate a preference."

"Really, I couldn't, Mr. Lavender. Each proof shows the prevailing fault."

"And what fault is that, Miss Lydia?"

"They are all too likelike."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Political Situation.

"What are your views on the political situation?"

"When it comes to a political situation," replied Farmer Corntassel, "you will have to talk to Si Simlin, the postmaster. He's the only feller around here that ever had one."—Washington Star.

CRUSHING THE KAFFIRS.

Treated Like Slaves, Even by White Children in South Africa.

In "The Real South Africa" the author, Lamborn Trait, says that the Kaffirs are not only enslaved by the Boers, but it would seem also by the other whites, who ought to know better. The white children born in South Africa acquire incurable habits of pride and indolence before they reach their teens. Their wonders are haughty and overbearing:

"The first day I landed in South Africa, I witnessed a small incident that will tell its own story. Strolling through the city of Durban in the early morning I saw a great hulking Kaffir carrying a bundle of papers to the door of a news agency, where a little boy about ten years of age was waiting to receive them. The Kaffir respectfully placed the bundle on the steps at the child's feet and moved away. He was immediately recalled and most imperiously. 'You monkey devil!' shrilled the child. 'How dare you leave the papers there! Take the bundle into the shop at once and untie it!' The Kaffir silently and humbly obeyed.

"'Now sort the papers!' ordered the child.

"Again the Kaffir obeyed. When his task was completed the little boy contemptuously pointed to the door. 'Get out!' he said.

"The Kaffir inclined reverently and backed out of the shop as though taking leave of royalty. The child did not even smile. The sneer on his face was fixed."

PITY THE POOR LIONS.

Hunters In Africa Actually Kick the Brutes Out of Their Way.

A globe trotter and a hunter, by name Percy Stanhope, is an Englishman who may or may not have a sense of humor. Here is what he said in New York recently about lion hunting in Africa:

"You hear them talk of lion hunting in Africa as though we were the king of sports. It's a beastly shame the way they treat the poor beasts. Why, when I was out in British East Africa two years ago, there was a movement on foot to punish lion hunters for cruelty to animals. In fact, they were seriously talking up the question with the home government.

"The lives of the poor lions are being made a burden to them. I can remember when the lions were the king of the jungle and sit on the platform of the railway stations, and some of those dried Englishmen actually booted the beasts out of the way. Think of it, the cruelty of it all.

"There being no foxes available, the sportsmen out in those parts have a habit of stirring up a lion and pursuing the poor beast with whoops and yells until it drops dead of exhaustion and actual fright. The poor beasts have been so terrorized that when they see a human being they whimper from fright. This fear shortens the life of the lions, and unless drastic steps are taken to put a stop to the cruelty there won't be any lions left in Africa."—New York World.

Fear is Useless.

Phobism is in addition to fear (another name for worry). If smugness be unlovely from a social point of view, worry is fatal to true living. Did it ever occur to you that fear can become a habit and a luxury, just as smoking is? But phobism is the more luxurious of the two, and the fear disease, we fear death, we fear that we shall be snubbed socially. And worry's separate mansion—our capacity for work is a definite, measurable way. I know many people addicted to the use of fear. Some of them use it to excess. To the psychologist fear is the most expensive of all habits that people indulge. Ninety-nine and forty-four one-hundredths per cent of fear is as much a drain on the system as submarine.—Elliott Park Frost in Atlantic.

How to Win an Author.

"There's no greater fallacy," said an author at the Authors' club, "than the popular one to the effect that writers don't like you to talk to them about their work.

"Mark Twain exploded this fallacy well when he said that there were three ways of pleasing an author—first, to tell him that you have read one of his books; second, to tell him you have read all his books, and, third, to ask him to let you read the manuscript of his forthcoming book. The first way wins his respect, the second his wild friendship and the third wins his love."—New York Tribune.

He Thought He Was Handsome.

"So she has quarreled with that ugly beau of hers! He's the ugliest man I have ever seen. What did they quarrel about?"

"She thought she would make him feel good and remarked that handsome men were too worth enough powder to blow them over the fence."

"And it didn't have the desired effect?"

"No; it made him furiously angry."—Houston Post.

OMENS IN BASEBALL.

A Manager's Method of Turning a Superstition to Account.

Writing on baseball matters in the New York Tribune, John J. McGraw hands this to say about the superstitions of the players:

"I recognize the superstitions of ball players. For example, back in 1904, when Bowerman was with the team, he came to the one day and said:

"'As I came in today I saw a team of white horses driving past the Polo grounds. That's a good sign. Watch me kill the ball this afternoon.'

"He did. The belief in his superstition had given him confidence. Bowerman spread the tidings of the white horses around the clubhouse. The next day somebody else saw the white horses, so the day after. By the end of the week the entire team was hitting like a house on fire. They all believed in the superstition, and it gave them confidence. One day my shortstop, Dahlen, remarked:

"'Funny how white horses always happen to drive past the ball park just when we are coming into the clubhouse. It's certainly lucky.'

"Of course I couldn't keep back a smile. On the day Bowerman told me he had seen the horses I made up my mind that everybody else would see them as long as it helped their batting. So I engaged a team to drive past the Polo grounds every day. That was the fact, and it shows the lengths to which a manager will go to cater to ball players' superstitions."

DALTON'S EXPERIMENT.

The great English chemist Dalton was a schoolteacher. He worked without a laboratory and with crude apparatus, mostly made by himself from simple materials. Here is an example described in his own words:

"Took an ale glass of a conical figure, two and a half inches in diameter and three inches deep; filled it with water that had been standing in the room and consequently of the temperature of the air nearly; put the bulb of the thermometer to the bottom of the glass, the scale being out of the water. Then, having noticed the temperature, I put the redhot tip of the poker half an inch deep in the water, holding it there steadily for half a minute, and as soon as I was withdrawn I dipped the bulb of a sensible thermometer into the water, when it rose in a few seconds to 100 degrees.

He then determined the temperature of the water at the bottom after five minutes, after twenty minutes and after an hour, and found that it rose gradually from 47 to 52 degrees. This simple experiment proved that water has its densest point at about what Dalton had been deafed by no less an authority than Rumford.—Youth's Companion.

The Conscientious Chinese Child.

One of our missionaries, writing of a little girl in the school under her care, says: "Last night Wah Noe told me she wanted to be 'a whole Christian,' as she called it. So we had a long talk and tried to think of all the wrongs she had done that she could confess it to each other. She counted these wrongs on her fingers: 'I did not brush my teeth as you told me to and I did not take off the lower shoe on the bed when I made it up, and I know I ought to always; I got angry with one of the girls at school; I did not use my soap when I took my bath; I did not try to do my examnie in multiplication; all the other girls did these things and I know I would too.'"—Cor. Christian Herald.

Poetry and Punctuation.

In his sketch "Narcissus" Robert Bridges, the English poet laureate, has banished the comma entirely, so that a possessor of adjectives may be taken at the reader's option, as separate qualities or as qualifying each other. Thus one may call his hero "almighty wonderful" or "almighty man as being both. Mr. Bridges' principles of punctuation are not obvious. He loves the exclamation mark, using it five times on the eight lines of the poem, and sprinkles dashes about with prodigality. He adopts the colon and does not use the interrogation mark, while using now and then a full stop.—Chicago News.

A Lucky Escape.

"I owe my success in life to politics."

"I was not aware that you were a politician."

"I'm not, but I thought I was once and got myself nominated for an office that, if I had been elected, would have paid me about $1,500 a year. I was so badly beaten that I dropped politics forever and took up the business that has brought me a fortune. It makes me shudder when I remember that if I had been elected I might now be afraid of doing something that would deprive me of the lodging house vote."—Chicago Herald.

Reckless.

STORIES of LISZT

How the Famous Master Played to a Hidden Audience.

A SURPRISE AT THE FINISH.

For a Moment It Filled the Hostess and Company With Dismay, but Proved a Case of All's Well That Ends Well—A Snub For a Tactless Baroness.

Liszt resented people counting on his playing. When Baroness K. invejgled him into promising to take tea with her, because he knew her father, she, on his accepting, invited a lot of friends, holding out hopes that Liszt would play. She pushed the piano into the middle of the room—no one could have possibly failed to see it.

Every one was on the qui vive when Liszt arrived and breathless with anticipation. Liszt, who had had many surprises of this sort, I imagine, saw the situation at a glance. After several people had been presented to him, Liszt, with his most captivating smile, said to the hostess:

"Madam, where is your piano?" and looked all about for the instrument though it was within an inch of his nose.

"Oh, monseigneur! Would you, really * * * ?" advancing toward the piano, triumphantly. "You are too kind. I never should have dared to ask you." And, waving her hand toward it, "Here is the piano!"

"Ah, yes," said Liszt, who dearly loves a joke, "I wished to put my hat on it."

Very crestfallen, but still undaunted, the tactless baroness cried, "But, monseigneur, you will not refuse, if only to play a scale—merely to touch the piano?"

But Liszt, as unkind as she was tactless, answered, coldly: "Madam, I never play my scales in the afternoon," and turned his back on her and talked with Madam Helbig.

On another occasion Liszt wrote to me that he would bring some of his songs to try over at 5 o'clock. I inclose his letter. What a chance, thought I, for me to give pleasure to some of my friends who I knew were wanting to see him. Although he had said entre nous in his letter, and I knew that he really wanted to look through the songs alone with me, I could not resist the temptation—though it was such rank disobedience—and said cheerily:

"Liszt is coming to me at 5 o'clock. If you would like to hear him, and consent to be hidden behind a door, I will invite you."

They all accepted with rapture and were assembled in the little salon before the time appointed. The door was left open and a large screen placed before it.

Then I fetched Liszt in our carriage, as he always does. I received him and the book of "Lieder," which he brought with him (Only Johann Nine were present.) He opened the book at "Constant dissolent ils!" one of his most beautiful songs, which has an exquisite but very difficult accompaniment. He played with fairy fingers, and we went over it several times. I could see the screen swerving and waving about, but Liszt's back was turned, so he could not see it.

After we had finished tea was served, and then he said, "Have you heard my 'Rigoletto'?"

"Yes," I said, and added, "but not by you."

"Well," he said, "I will play it for you. Your piano is much better than the one I have. It is a pleasure to touch it."

The screen, now alive with emotion, almost tipped over. After "Rigoletto" he played "Les Patineurs de Vienne," and this time the screen actually did topple over and exposed to view the group of badly frightened ladies huddled behind it. I shuddered to think how the master would take this horrible treachery.

He took it better than I expected—in fact, he laughed outright. The ladies came forward and were presented to him and everything went on as before that Liszt was, too; at any rate, he laughed as much at my ruse and contrition that the tears rolled down his cheeks. He wiped them away with his pocket handkerchief, which had an embroidered F. L. in the corner. This he left behind as I kept it as a souvenir.—Mme. de Hegermann-Lindencrone in Harper's Magazine.

Behind the Times.

Speeder—Think of it! Here's this old earth making one rotation in twenty-four hours, the same as it did 6,000 years ago.

Jinks—Well, what of it?

"Great Scott, man! Can't we devise some way to speed her up a little?"—Life.

Either.

You can't judge a man by his actions. The fellow who deliberately walks in front of a quick moving auto may be a perfectly proper object of sympathy, and then again he may be a professional damage seeker. — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

By the Feet.

"Growing? Why, every time I go home from a trip I find that that baby of mine has grown another foot."

"Geel Sha'll look like a centipede pretty soon."—Houston Post.

WAR TAX NOW IN FULL EFFECT IN U. S.

The emergency war tax bill to raise $100,000,000 in revenue went into full effect last Monday. The provisions of the measure levying taxes on tobacco, beer and wine went into effect on November 1 and the remaining sections became effective today.

The latter involves taxes on banks, pawnbrokers, proprietors of theatres, including motion picture houses, owners of circuses and other shows, perfume, cosmetics, chewing gum and similar articles, commercial papers of all kinds, steamship tickets, parlor car seats and sleeping car berths and telephone and telegraph messages where the charge exceeds 15 cents. Stamps in denominations of from $5 to one cent are to be affixed to these articles.

SPIES IN THE RANKS.

Two soldiers, a lance corporal and a private in the Hants regiment of Kitchener's new army, stationed at Codford, have been proved to be German spies and have been dealt with "by the military authorities." Copies of letters relating to the movements and proposed movements of troops were found in their possession.

GOVERNMENT TO PROVIDE SEED GRAIN.

Hon Robert Rogers, acting minister of commerce, announced that an order-in-council had been passed setting aside $1,000,000 to provide seed grain for the settlers in the crop-failure districts of Alberta and Southern Saskatchewan. Another order-in-council provides for the expenditure of $150,000 to provide for the immediate needs of the settlers in these districts. Owing to the drought in Southern Alberta and Southern Saskatchewan, this year, the crops in these areas were almost a total loss. Recently settled, this bore particularly heavily on the settlers, who had not had time enough to accumulate grain to such an emergency.

Mr. Rogers appointed Angus McKay, inspector of western experimental farms, and W. J. Lindsay, to obtain suitable seed for next year's seeding. Government returns show an increase of 40 per cent. in the area under cultivation in the prairie provinces this fall compared with last year.

Southern Alberta's Contribution.

Hon. W. T. White, treasurer of the Canadian patriotic fund, acknowledged the receipt of $20,867.44 from the Southern Alberta branch of the fund, per W. M. Carmacher, treasurer. The total of the fund is now $1, 136,900.

THE BELGIAN AND FARMING.

"There has been some discussion of inducing the Belgian to go into your larger western states for the purpose of taking up farming, but I cannot but believe that this would be a mistake, for the Belgian is not a farmer as you understand the word here, but is an intensive cultivator. Give him a plot of ground of half an acre, or a full acre, and he will produce more from it than many a farmer will from 50 acres, but he would be lost on a larger tract."—J. K. Jerome.

Globe-Trotter Loses $25,000 Wager

In his walk around the world Dr. Dawson has had a disappointment almost at the winning post, and may lose $25,000 as a result.

Many in town will remember Dr. Dawson, the globe-trotter, who stayed in the city for a few days some two or three months ago as he was walking across Canada on his last lap of a walking trip round the world. When here he delivered a lecture on his tour and experiences and made a number of friends during his stay. According to the terms of his contract he had to earn his living while on the march and he was not permitted to use any conveyance. He was due to be in Perth, Australia, by midnight of the last day of December of this year, when he would then be entitled to $25,000, the amount of the wager put up by the sporting club for the physical endurance contest on which three started out. The other two who entered fell out some time ago. Dr. Dawson has cut things too fine apparently. He had a considerable amount of time to his advantage when he was here, and expressed his intention of sailing about the 28th inst from Vancouver, so that he would arrive in Australia a day or two before the expiry of the ten years stipulated in the contract.

Through a communication received by Chief Reynolds we learn that Dr. Dawson is not going to make the grade, as he missed his boat at the Pacific coast by two days.

HELPING ENEMY ACROSS THE BORDER.

Winnipeg is believed to be the western headquarters of an organization having for its object the spiriting of alien enemies across the American border. In that connection several citizens are under surveillance, and will be arrested.

Since the outbreak of the war it has come to the attention of the authorities that there was a large exodus of Austrians and Germans through Emerson. That in itself was not a matter for suspicion, but when trace of the aliens was lost shortly after their arrival at the southern town, an investigation was commenced. It resulted in Otto Geller, a farmer of Ridgeville, being placed under arrest. Geller claims to be a naturalized Canadian, and if the charges lodged against him can be substantiated, he is liable to be tried for treason, a serious crime involving the extreme penalty.

War in Progress Now Four Months

Four months ago Monday the war really began. One week before Austria declared war upon Servia, and three days later Britain declared war upon Germany. Later Japan joined the allies, and still later Turkey joined with the Kaiser.

The news today is that the Germans are on the defensive on all sides. Though they hold Belgium, which they gained at an appalling sacrifice of men and money, they have no strategic advantage by their capture. They have lost the flower of their manhood, armament unheard of in value, the respect of the nations of the world, and are now further from their communications than before.

In Belgium and France the Germans are on the defensive; in East Prussia the rapidly-advancing Russians are 30 miles within the border. Though the details of the battle in Poland have not been confirmed, enough has come through to show that the Germans have been defeated, perhaps disastrously. The Russians are at Cracow. They have overrun Galicia and are crowding over the Carpathians into Hungary. The German merchant marine has been captured, destroyed, or held in ports. The German colonies have been captured. Germany has aroused the antagonism of the neutrals of the world.

So in brief is a statement of the happenings of the first four months of the war.

Aliens With Canadian Soldiers Sent Back

The names of thirty-eight aliens who were members of the first expeditionary force and who have been sent back to Canada by the war office has been received by the minister of militia. None of the men who have been returned and whose passages are being paid by the government are citizens of Canada. Practically all of them were born either in Germany or Austria, and had never taken out Canadian naturalization papers. Most of them came to Canada from the United States to enlist. The war office naturally takes the view that it would not be wise to have in the firing line of the Allies men who are still citizens of a hostile country.

It was pointed out by the minister of militia the return of these men does not mean that naturalized citizens of Canada bearing Austrian or German names will not be allowed to enlist with the second expeditionary force. If they are Canadian citizens and want to fight under the British flag their enlistment will be encouraged.

GERMAN OFFICIAL LOSSES.

The latest official German casualty lists, numbers 86 and 87, containing together 14,286 names, bring the grand total up to 627,073, including 64 Saxony, 66 Wurtembery and 72 Bavarian lists. The last three Bavarian lists contain 4,218 names of officers and men belonging to two infantry regimenta.
